Over the past decade there has been a significant increase in interest from educators and the general public about deafness, special education, and the development of children with special needs. The education of deaf children in the United States has been seen as a remarkable success story around the world, even while it continues to engender domestic debate. In Educating Deaf Students: From Research to Practice, Marc Marschark, Harry G. Lang, and John A. Albertini set aside the politics, rhetoric, and confusion that often accompany discussions of deaf education. As a deaf person and a deaf student, I wish that my parents had had this type of help available to them back in the 60's and 70's, when I was attending public school. I know they were deeply frustrated with the total lack of information concerning how to participate in my education, and why I 'learned' some things easily and well, but had problems with other things. This is an excellent book which is extremely helpful for reference as it includes research as well as practice. I used this book to aid in my research project as part of my dissertation and it was invaluable. Educating Deaf Students: From Research to Practice. Read more. Report abuse. IN COLLECTIONS. Books to Borrow. Books for People with Print Disabilities. Internet Archive Books. Uploaded by station26.cebu on June 20, 2020. Raising and educating a deaf child a comprehensive guide to the choices, controversies, and decisions faced by parents and educators / by: Marschark, Marc. Published: (1997). Search Options. Buy a cheap copy of Educating Deaf Students: From Research book by Harry G. Lang. Over the past decade there has been a significant increase in interest from educators and the general public about deafness, special education, and the development of children with special needs. The education of deaf children in the United States has been seen as a remarkable success story around the world, even while it continues to engender domestic debate. In Educating Deaf Students: From Research to Practice, Marc Marschark, Harry G. Lang, and Read Full Overview.