Lord & Taylor Chain on Market
Including North Avenue Dept. Store

Michael Pollack for the Scotch Plains-Fanwood Times

Meet to Review Projects
TOWNSHIP AND UNION COUNTY OFFICIALS MEET TO REVIEW PROJECTS

Scotch Plains-Fanwood School District officials last week met with Union County officials to discuss projects in the township.

"That is in process, but we must be careful that the texts are aligned to what we're going to come across," Dr. Hayes said. She added that the Scotch Plains-Fanwood board is not interested in the "current text." Rather, she requested that her board be consulted about the content of the text that is ultimately adopted by the state.

"We want to be sure that our students are being taught the best material that is out there," Dr. Hayes said.

According to Kathy Regan of Scotch Plains, "Most of the problems seem to be coming from the middle school level, where the state's standards are the most stringent. It seems like the middle school teachers are having the most difficulty with the state's standards."

The Scotch Plains-Fanwood School District has been working on an interim test since the state introduced the new standards. The interim test is designed to help the district determine whether the new standards are appropriate for the district's students.

The interim test is scheduled to be given in March, and the results will be used to determine whether the district should continue using the interim test or switch to a different test.

The Scotch Plains-Fanwood School District is one of several districts in New Jersey that have been working on interim tests since the state introduced the new standards. The interim tests are designed to help the districts determine whether the new standards are appropriate for their students.

The interim tests are scheduled to be given in March, and the results will be used to determine whether the districts should continue using the interim tests or switch to a different test.

The Scotch Plains-Fanwood School District is one of several districts in New Jersey that have been working on interim tests since the state introduced the new standards. The interim tests are designed to help the districts determine whether the new standards are appropriate for their students.
Chang W. Lee—The New York TimesRedux. Anger and 'This Constant Fear' for Asians in Atlanta. For Asians in Atlanta, the shootings bring up long-hidden accounts of anti-Asian behavior. Live news, investigations, opinion, photos and video by the journalists of The New York Times from more than 150 countries around the world. Subscribe for coverage of U.S. and international news, politics, business, technology, science, health, arts, sports and more. Times Online for news, sports, photos and community events throughout the Howick, Pakuranga, Botany, Ormiston and surrounding areas. Times Online is local.Â In any normal year, the Resene Colour of Fashion designs would open four Resene Designer Read the latest issue. Read past issues of Times. View past issues of the Howick and Pakuranga Times or Botany and Ormiston Times. Subscribe to YouTube. Æ Prev.